

Embracing Vanpools

On the Road to Saving Energy With Chevron's Vanpool Program

Angela Spinelli: When we get there, we get there. I like to drive. I'll drive anything. I'm Angela Spinelli. I'm a corporate recruiter at Chevron, and I'm a volunteer vanpool driver. I feel really responsible for the riders in my van. I've got to make sure the van gets there. I've got to make sure the van's ready to drive tomorrow morning to get these people to work. I enjoy it because I have people I have to care about. It becomes like a little family-type thing. I know it sounds corny. That's just me.

Jackson Dinh: My name is Jackson Dinh, Chevron manager for the vanpool office. Vanpool service helps Chevron employees exhausted from high traffic congestion. Right now we have 155 active vans in our fleet, and with Chevron's reputation built on safety, we have some of the safest vans on the road today.

Angela Spinelli: It's not a free lunch. One of my backup drivers, he was asking me, "You're the one who has to take the van in to get its tires fixed?" He was amazed because he just thought I made a phone call and someone came and did all this stuff for me. You know, it's just fun. You know, I don't know – I guess I'm just a glutton for punishment.

See you Dan. Do you have your lunch money? And your milk money? Have a good day.
