

video transcript

day in the life: health, environment and safety superintendent

When I was growing up, there was no access to power, gas or electricity.

Since then, Bangladesh has developed their gas resources, and Chevron is part of that business.

I'm Sonjoy Kar, health, environment and safety superintendent for Chevron in Bangladesh.

I make sure people are safe in their day-to-day activity, not only the plant, our outside community as well.

We're collaboratively working with our community. So if anything happen to us, you saw the impact to our community so we have a strong relationship with our community.

Every day, I go around to all the facilities and different job locations to make sure people are working safely, and they follow all the permitting and other processes.

I feel proud as a safety professional. Safety is our number one priority for our business. This purpose is very important to me, and I make sure that people are working in here in safe way.